A Reply and a Promise

Husna Jamal
International Islamic University Malaysia

Why were there tears in my eyes when I read your words? My dearest Sir, all your praises are too high, I’m afraid Did you know that reading your line 6 actually hurts? Well, I guess some things are better left unsaid…

It took me 25 years and 10,000 kilometres to finally find somebody Who understands me the way you do and deeply touches my heart But in just 5 months there’d be nothing left but lonely poetry As you said, by then Nature’s Force would have torn us apart

Never have I met a man as uniquely matchless as you, truly Who seems to hide himself behind a thick steel armour But when you start opening up I am very glad that I see The fascinating layers not many people could uncover

Poems, flowers, photographs and a painting we’ll keep Alongside beautiful memories, especially ones in the snow From where I stand now celestial bliss isn’t at all cheap But I promise you, “Made of Emotions” will be in my tomorrow.

(2 March 2007, Darwin College, University of Cambridge, UK)

---

1 Husna Jamal is a Lecturer of Linguistics at the Department of English Language and Literature, International Islamic University Malaysia, where she earned her Bachelor’s degree before pursuing her Master’s at the Department of Linguistics, University of Cambridge. As a passionate language enthusiast, she’s both a linguist by training and a writer/poet at heart.