Articles submitted for publication in the Journal of Islam in Asia are subject to a process of peer review, in accordance with the normal academic practice.

This journal is indexed by ERA 2010 Journal Title List, Australian Research Council, Australian Government.

© 2018 by
International Islamic University Malaysia

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, translated, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without prior written permission of the publisher.
Wasatiyyah (Moderation) as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism

Wasatiyyah (Kesederhanaan) sebagai Satu Prinsip dan objektif Shariah adalah satu Solusi Mencegah Keganasan dan Ekstrim

Muhammad Mumtaz Ali,∗ Muneer Muhammed Rafique∗∗

Abstract

The Shariah, the foundation of the scheme of life, seems to be the most misunderstood concept of our time. The Shariah is confined to the domain of law in a rigid way and used out of context in an exclusivist manner. This has generated numerous implications to thought and life. It is generally assumed that the violent extremism that we witness in many parts of the world is the result of this misrepresentation of the Shariah. The situation demands a textual and contextual reading of the Shariah’s principles scientifically, especially, the principle of the wasatiyyah as an objective of the Shariah [Maqasid Shariah]. A correct view of the Shariah and the principle of wasatiyyah will help to remove the misunderstandings. It will also help to prevent the violent extremist and terrorist tendencies. This paper, therefore, aims at examining the principle of wasatiyyah based on the textual study of the Principle Sources – the Quran and Sunnah - and determines its scope to counter violence, extremism and terrorism. The socio-ethical dimensions and the principle of wasatiyyah as principles and objectives of the Shariah in relation to extremist trends will be explored and analyzed in this paper. This paper will present the principle of wasatiyyah as a solution for preventing the current extremist tendencies among some Muslims. The descriptive and analytical approaches will be employed in this study. Based on the textual study in a changing context, this paper concludes that the principle of wasatiyyah, owing its significance in the Sharī’ah, needs to be highlighted and acknowledged as a major principle and objective of the Sharī’ah which would be helpful to solve the societal problems besides its significance in private life.

Keywords: Shariah, Wasatiyyah, violent tendencies, extremism, contextual reading.

∗ Professor, Department of Usul al-Din & Comparative Religion, IRKHS, IIUM.
∗∗ Research scholar, Department of Usul al-Din & Comparative Religion, IRKHS, IIUM.
Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism

Abstrak

Kata Kunci: Shariah, Wasatiyyah, kecenderungan kepada keganasan, ekstremis, pembacaan konteks.

Introduction
Wassatiyyah (moderation) as one of the important principles of the Shariah has not been emphasized in the contemporary discourse for a long time. This negligence has resulted in the rise of extremist tendencies among people. It is high time to bring back this principle to its proper place in the scheme of the development of life and society. In fact, it is presented through the Quran and Sunnah as one of the very important principles for cultural and civilizational development. Its proper explanation and application will work as an effective method and mechanism to check extremist tendencies. The current scenario in the world demands a proper exposure of the concept of wasatiyyah. Hence, this paper focuses on the elaboration of the wasatiyyah as the principle and objective of the Shariah. In order to establish the validity and authenticity of our position we will first embark into the commandments of the Quran and Sunnah which will be followed by the analysis of the views of commentators of the Quran. In addition, the views of some scholars on this issue will also be referred and analysed.

The Arabic term wasatiyyah is generally used to denote the moderation in the personal conduct as well as a collection of behavioural characteristics. It may be simply referred to as an attitude or position or stance that is contrary to the extremism and excessiveness. The term wasatiyyah is a verbal noun (masdar) of the original word wasat. Instead of assigning to a single literal and unilateral meaning, many other synonymous meanings, as in the case of other words in the Arabic language, are also be credited to wasatiyyah. Tawassut, i’tidāl, tawāzun and iqtisād are translated as moderation, justice, balance and prudence respectively. The opposite of wasatiyyah is taňarruf, which refers to inclination towards the peripheries which is simply translated in to “extremism” or “radicalism” in our time.

The word developed from its simple meaning into a broad concept with multiple dimensions, basically stems from the Qur’anic designation of the Muslim community as ummatan wasa†an. It has been translated as midmost community or justly balanced community. This community which maintain wasatiyya is considered the best community. The Qur’ān says:

And thus we have made you a just community (or midmost community) that you will be witness over the people and the Messenger will be a witness over you.

As we mentioned before, the literal meaning of the word wasat can be translated into the three interrelated meanings; i.e. to be moderate; to be in the middle; and thirdly to be the best. It denotes that the taking the middle of the road, and positioning in the center of the circle. Its meaning also extends to a number of other alternatives such as the “best” and “strongest.” For example, the sun at noon (middle) represents its best performance as it emits its hottest temperature compared to morning and evening. Similarly, the youth signifies the peak and energetic period of manhood compared to the childhood and old age. This is to say that, the term wasat represents the designation of the Muslim community, connotes the meaning of the best, strong, justly balanced community ever

2 Ibid.
4 Ibid.
5 The Qur’ān, 2:143.
6 Yaakub, 65.
7 Kamali, The Middle…9.
Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism created by God. In the same vein, the ‘asr prayer is depicted as the best prayer in the Qur’an. God says;

Guard strictly your (habit of) prayers, especially the Middle Prayer; and stand before God in a devout (frame of mind).8

This prayer occurs at late afternoon and it is the middle of the other four prayers.9 Ibn Arabi (d. 1240) affirms that the term wasat is equivalent to khiyār (chosen, selected) and ‘adl (just) linguistically.10 A Prophetic tradition which affirms the exact meaning of wasatiyyah is noteworthy in this regard. According to this report,11 the Prophet (pbuh) himself clearly stated that the wasat is to mean justice (al-‘adl). Justice in literal sense is a middle-most position between two or more opposing sides, without inclining to or favouring any of the sides, and not swayed by emotions, biases or prejudice in making judgments, decisions or solving disputes.12 The meaning that the Prophet (pbuh) envisages in this hadith clearly represents a number of manifestations such as attitude, unbiased stance and character. One of the wise sayings of Arabs which is khair al-‘umūr al-wasat also meaning to say that the best of affairs is the middle and moderate position.13 The Prophetic tradition which says; “Beware of excessiveness in religion, people14 before you have perished as a result of such excessiveness”15 is a clear warning not to be an extremist and urges his followers to stay in moderate and balanced position in the affairs of life and society.

During the time of Hajj (pilgrimage), the Prophet (pbuh) was heading to Muzdalifah. He halted on the way for a while and asked Ibn

8 The Qur’an, 2:238.
9 Kamali, The Middle..., 9.
11 This hadith has been reported by Imam Ahmad on the authority of Abu Sa’id al-Khuḍrī.
13 Ibid.
Abbas to collect some stones for him. Ibn Abbas took small stones instead of big ones. Upon seeing the small stones, the Messenger [pbuh] commented acknowledging Ibn Abbas’s deeds; (Yes with such, it is what I intended). Beware of excessiveness in religion.”16 Emphasizing the same point, the Messenger of God [pbuh] has used to say; do not overly be strict with yourselves lest God be all the stricter with you. For you what remains (of those who have done so) in the hermitages and monasteries?17 As God himself stated in the Qur’an; “But the Monasticism which they invented for themselves, We did not prescribe for them.”18 All these textual references in the Qur’an and Sunnah clearly show the importance and significance of the wasat and its use as principle and objective of the Shariah. It is equally applicable and significant to individual and society. Before going to the detailed elaboration of the important dimensions of this concept, it would be better to have a cursory glance at certain aspects of this concept.

Wasatiyyah as a Balance: the Prophetic Approach
Keeping a balance and moderate approach in all walks of life is somehow part of disposing the higher ethical value of justice. In fact, moderation and balance are the sub themes originating from the fatherly principle of justice. They are deeply interconnected and interdependent altogether. Therefore, wasatiyyah and justice are inseparable in most of the cases.19 The absolute justice is a divine attribute cannot be equate to humans. The ideal or perfect justice is mirage.20 It is deemed impossible to be accomplished perfectly by people since it is transcendental and super natural. Therefore, we need to understand that the realization of the absolute justice would only be apprehended by the disposal of God on the Day of Judgment. This world is not deemed as an abode of such realization of ultimate justice. Similarly, the complete realization of wasatiyyah would not be sufficiently manifested in this world by people,

16 Ibid.
18 The Qur’an, 57:27
19 Kamali, The Middle..., 11.
though they are being instructed to do so. As in the case of imparting justice, we are ordained to be moderate and justly balanced beings as much as possible. The Qur’an emphatically calls people especially the Muslims to uphold justice through several statements but, people, by their innate nature, are not likely to carry out the herculean task of realizing the absolute justice. All the Prophets (pbuh) sent by God had carried out the responsibility of imparting justice to their societies.

“We have already sent Our messengers with clear evidences and sent down with them the Scripture and the balance that the people may maintain [their affairs] in justice.”

This instruction clearly identifies that in all revealed books the emphasis on balance and justice are included as the part of the mission of all the Prophets (pbuh). This clearly indicates that it is a basic duty of people to maintain balance, justice and moderation between the extreme tendencies. People have always been tended naturally to incline towards something in excess or tended to be heedless and reckless in their life. Islam as the way of life, in fact, fulfils the role of balancing life with all of its affairs in its right proportion and right degree. The Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) in one way, was correcting the innate human qualities in its right place and right degree. Once he openly proclaimed that his mission of Prophethood constitutes moulding and perfecting the human character. “I was sent to perfect the noblest morals.” The wasatiyyah is primarily a noble character which was included in the Prophetic mission. The life of the Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) is the exemplary manifestation of some of the virtues such as justice and balance cannot be materialized by men in the worldly life since they are the attributes of God by whom alone it would be possible.

21 The complete and flawless manifestation of some of the virtues such as justice and balance cannot be materialized by men in the worldly life since they are the attributes of God by whom alone it would be possible.
22 “O you who have attained to faith! Be ever steadfast in upholding equity, bearing witness to the truth for the sake of God, even though it be against your own selves or your parents and kinsfolk. Whether the person concerned be rich or poor, God's claim takes precedence over [the claims of] either of them. Do not, then, follow your own desires, lest you swerve from justice: for if you distort [the truth], behold, God is indeed aware of all that you do!” (4: 135), “O you who have attained to faith! Be ever steadfast in your devotion to God, bearing witness to the truth in all equity; and never let hatred of anyone lead you into the sin of deviating from justice. Be just: this is closest to being God-conscious. And remain conscious of God: verily, God is aware of all that you do.” (5:8)
23 The Qur’an, 4: 28.
24 The Qur’an. 57: 25.
tion of perfect human character. The manifestation of the model of universal and perfect man can be found in him. The Qur’an attests this claim by saying; “And indeed you are of a great moral character.” Sayed Hossein Nasr describes the Prophet (pbuh) as “the universal man par excellence and also the quintessence of all that is positive in cosmic manifestation.” The noble aspects of life have been clearly depicted in the Prophetic model. As an ethically approved scheme of life, the perfect model of the Prophet has to be emulated by humanity. Worship, rituals, socio-political affairs, family and economic affairs all have been modelled through his life.

As part of this mission, the Prophet (pbuh) had to bring the exact proportion of balance among people with different habits and potentials. As a human being, each and every companion had inclined to one or another temperament. They had never been consistent in keeping a balance in their temperaments and skills. Unlike the Prophet (pbuh), their moral and personal qualities have not been proportionately conglomerated by the divine help. Whereas the excellence in governance and the quality of justice overwhelmed in Umar’s character which made him distinguished from others as a just ruler, it was the character of austerity and asceticism that made Abu Dharr distinguished. Whereas Abu Bakr is the symbol of patience and determination, Usman was known for his modesty and humility. This shows that the human qualities among the companions had not been combined proportionally. Whereas some characters have been possessed by some companions, some other noble qualities have augmented in other companions. Therefore, they would not be considered as moderate and balanced in that sense. They had been in divergent levels in securing these noble characters and manners in their personalities. Their temperaments and characters vary significantly from person to person. But the balance lied in the Muslim society as a whole was dominant. The community in which different companions lived with different natures and qualities made them the community of justly balanced.

27 The Qur’an; 68: 4.

New Conceptualization of Wasatiyyah

Grounding on the textual premises of the Qur’an and the Propheti-c traditions, scholars have broadly developed the concept of wasatiyyah pertaining to various dimensions. From a narrow and literal meaning, the concept has momentously been elaborated and interpreted multi-dimensionally according to the social changes and needs of time. It seems the contemporary scholars have much concern on the concept of moderation. They have interpreted the concept in such a way to meet the newly evolved challenges of alleged extremism and terrorism. Kamal Hasan, for example, argues that the wasatiyyah encompasses three fundamental components namely justice, excellence and balance/moderation.29 Hashim Kamali defines the wasatiyyah as a “recommended posture that occurs to the people of sound nature and intellect, distinguished by its aversion to both extremism and manifest neglect.”30 Kamali envisages the moderation in a comprehensive way. He writes; “moderation is a virtue that helps to develop social harmony and equilibrium in personal affairs within the family and society and the much wide spectrum of human relationships.”31

Muhammad Asad also visualizes the moderation as a hallmark of the Muslim community and their scheme of life.32 The extreme approaches in religious affairs as well as mundane affairs deemed as blameworthy and therefore they are to be avoided at any context. It means that the moderation has to do with all aspects of human life. The Qur’an exhorts the believers to bring this quality in all aspects of life. It does not encourage to place great emphasis either side of the life. According to him, moderation is a branch and subservient aspect of tawhid. Referring to this aspect, he argues that the expression of a community of the middle towards the problem of man’s existence. To avoid conflict between spirit and the flesh the balanced approach and a moderate position is considered as praiseworthy. Islam gives the right way of balance and moderation through its teachings.33

30 Kamali, The Middle..., 9.
31 Ibid., 1.
33 Ibid.
For Yusuf al-Qaradawi moderation, besides an ethical trait of an individual, is an alternative life approach for people at global level. The quality of moderation is required to be accepted as a scheme for life and society as explained by Islam. He sees the wasatiyyah as a viable and global alternative way of life. In order to save people from engendering hostility of extremism, moderation need to be restored at collective level.\textsuperscript{34} It is, therefore, not proper to confine the concept of wasatiyyah at individual level. It is urgent to bring the idea in social level as well.\textsuperscript{35} For Wahbah al-Zuḥaylī, “Wasatiyyah is meant as keeping moderation and balance in belief, morality and character. Hence, it functions in the manner of treating others and in the applied systems of socio-ethical order and governance.”\textsuperscript{36} The above mentioned scholars envisage wasatiyyah as a life scheme not only as an ethical value of an individual. It is a social requirement. In short, in the light of the above views one can see wasatiyyah as a call for its collective application in all aspects of life of a community.

The Evolution of Wasatiyyah as a Higher Principle of the Shariah

From the above analysis, we would be able to conclude that the concept of wasatiyyah serves as an integral theme of the Shariah along with other principles. The scholars who are specialized in the fields of Shariah and usūl al-fiqh have acknowledged some major principles as the maqāṣīd al-Shariah. Wassatiyya is one of them. New conceptualization of maqāṣīd has been instrumental in proposing some major but new principles besides the old conception of five categorizations of maqāṣīd. For example, the voices of preservation of justice and freedom of expression as the higher principle of the Shariah have recently been increased. In the past the principle of wasatiyyah, as an objective of the Shariah, did not gain the proper attention from the maqāṣīd scholars. The early scholars did not categorically employ the concept of wasatiyyah as a higher objective of the Shariah. There is much scope for the interpretation of meaning of maqāṣīd. The early scholars, especially those who were specialized in the Shariah and usūl al-fiqh, had extensively deliberated on the principle of wasatiyyah. They dealt the issue in detail with the

\textsuperscript{34} Al-Qaradawi, \textit{Islamic…}, xii.
\textsuperscript{35} Ahmad F. Yousuf, \textit{Applications of Wasatiyyah in the Contemporary Muslim World}, (Gombak: IIUM Press, 2015), xiii.
\textsuperscript{36} Kamali, \textit{The Middle …}, 11.
Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism various philosophical and methodological implications. Nevertheless, they did not expose wasatiyya as an objective of the Shariah. Among the classical scholars, al-Shâṭîbî has contributed much in developing the concept into broader dimensions. The idea of wasatiyyah has been present throughout his book. It will be imperative to examine his scholarly views on wasatiyyah and their scope of conceiving the idea as a higher objective of the Shariah.

Although al-Shâṭîbî confined himself in limiting the maqāṣid in five fundamentals, many of the other important subsidiary objectives have clearly been illustrated in his writings. He distinguishes wasatiyyah as one of the most distinctive characteristics of the Shariah since it keeps a moderate and middle way in legislating rules and imposing laws. When the laws are imposed as obligations, it proceeds and maintains the path of moderation and consummates fairness.37 His view on wasatiyyah especially in legal matters is obvious.

It is a path which appropriates both extremes without inclining toward either of them, and which remains within the limits of human capacity, thereby causing us neither hardship nor harm. Indeed, the obligations entailed by the Law of Islam are founded upon an equilibrium which requires that every one of us progress toward perfect moderation.38 Although he does not categorize wasatiyyah as an objective of the Shariah, he unequivocally located the concept at a higher place in the fold of Shariah. Al-Shâṭîbî understands the Shariah as a middle path which is free from excessiveness and extremism. Al-Shâṭîbî was treating the Shariah with a universal outlook. According to Wael B. Hallaq, al-Shâṭîbî has attempted to demonstrate the true nature of the Shariah which draws a middle course between extreme and uncontrolled lenient attitudes guided by personal interests.39 That is why he states time and again throughout the book that the “Shariah represents nothing but a middle-of-the-road position between undue difficulty (’usr) and extreme ease (yusur).”40 Although he presents the Shariah as a wasatiyyah scheme in his designation as a middle of the road position, but his presentation of wasatiyyah confines at individual level. Perhaps he may be the first scholar who made meticulous observation on the feature of wasatiyyah which is ingrained in the breadth and width of the Shariah.

38 Ibid.
40 Ibid.

Despite of a number of serious scholarly deliberations on moderation by the classical and contemporary scholars, Ibn Ashur alone, as far as the researcher knew, might be the one who presented moderation as a higher objective of the Shariah. He describes moderation with the Arabic word samahah (magnanimity) which means “standing midway between sternness (tadyiq) and (tasāhul).” He explains the idea of samahah as the ideal of moderation, justice and temperance. Although he adduced the principle of wasatiyyah (he used the word samahah magnanimity in place of wasatiyyah) as a higher objectives of the Shari‘ah. However, he elaborated the concept very little.

In order to demonstrate the need to include wasatiyyah as a higher principle and objective of the Shariah, we need to reflect upon some of the Qur‘anic injunctions which are very much related to the wider scope of the wasatiyya. For this, the researcher employs an inductive method of reading and also analysis to highlight the wider scope of wasatiyyah as elaborated in the Qur’an as a higher and universal principle of the Shari‘ah.

Wasatiyyah based Approach of the Shariah underlying in the Qur‘anic Injunctions

Besides the other meanings such as moderation, middle and best, our discussion focuses on central meaning of wasatiyyah as balance. We

---

42 Ibid.

43 In order to make understand what inductive method exactly is, Sherman Jackson elucidates the idea through an imaginary anecdote. To open the window, fetch a fan, turn off the lights and pour a glass of water are the four separate statements or commands. Imagine a man is coming to his house and delivers the above mentioned statements to his wife. She serves her husband according to his commands. At the same time, these scattered separate commands definitely transmit a cumulative meaning of “it’s hot” which is not really literally spoken by this man. Although the word ‘hot’ is not literally spelled out, the most powerful meaning he shared to his wife is the same. If she is able to understand the real meaning of his command she can address the issue by various means. Sherman A. Jackson, Literalism, Empiricism and Induction Apprehending and Concretizing Islamic Law’s Maqāṣid al-Sharī‘ah in the Modern World in Michigan State Law Review (Vol. 2006:1469-1486). 1471.
Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism can find out a wasatiyyah based approach, rightly balanced approach of the Shariah in matters of life. By wasatiyyah based approach, we mean a balanced and sophisticated approach based on the Shariah principles without leaning towards either side of trends in society. It is a right sort of approach dealing with any issues at hand. Besides the explicit and categorical statement of God in the Qur’an on wasatiyyah, the very concept is also implicitly underlying in the spirit of the Shariah itself. Many of the Qur’anic statements promote the idea without using the explicit and categorical textual expressions. The rulings and admonitions in the Qur’an also carries a right sort of balance and proportion in every aspects of life even the spiritual and devotional affairs. A meticulous pondering and careful reading of the Qur’an enable us to find out the ideals of wasatiyyah available in various statements of the Quran. Without explicitly declaring, God chooses to convey the principle of wasatiyyah to the readers with clarity. Therefore, from the very outset, we need to analyze some Qur’anic statements in which the notion of wasatiyyah is included invisibly. From the different commands and admonitions of God, the cumulative meaning of wasatiyyah could be induced from the following statements of the Quran. The concept of wasatiyyah is packed with the spirit of all the rulings and teachings of the Shariah. The following exposition of the opening chapter of the Qur’an demonstrates the theme more clearly and role of Islam as middle and balanced way of human life.

The Wasatiyyah Theme in Surah Al-Fatihah

Among the ayahs, the employment of the theme wasatiyyah in sūrat al-Fātihah can be read in between lines through inductive method. Sūrat al-Fātihah, the opening chapter is the most important chapter in the Qur’an which is ordained to be invoked by every Muslim as his basic invocation during his five times daily prayers. The prayers would not be completed unless the sūrat al-Fātihah is being recited. The most important part in this prayer is to make supplication to God to make him steadfast on the right path and never to let him be corrupted and deviated into the paths of those who have been incurred His wrath and those who have gone astray. The right path, in fact, we seek is the guidance for a middle way, far away from the two poles of either extremisms. A Muslim is ordained to invoke this prayer at least 17 times in a day, unquestionably indicates the importance of this prayer. God calls it ṣirāt al-mustaqīm, (straight path) which is in between the two extremes approaches taken by various major religions. A significant number of the Qur’anic exegeses are of the opinion that among the major religions Christianity and Judaism are included. The Qur’an urges Muslim community not to imitate the Christians who are extreme in their religion. God says:

Say: O people of the Book! Exceed not in your religion the bounds (of what is proper), trespassing beyond the truth, nor follow the vain desires of people who went wrong in times gone by, who misled many, and strayed (themselves) from the even Way.44

This warning constitutes all forms of belief, worship, rituals and transactions. Although both of the communities have kept high level of extremism and rejection in their religious affairs in general, the Christianity in particular, has gone, according to the Quran, beyond all permissible limits of their religion. Due to their excessiveness in faith, they were particularly admonished in the Qur’an. “Do not exceed the limits of your religion.”45 Thus, they transgressed the permissible limits of religion by elevating the status of Isa (Jesus-pbuh) to the level of God and assumed him as son of God. The love of the so called Christians to the Prophet Isa (Jesus-pbuh) crossed the limitation. As a result of their blind love, they ascribed divinity To Jesus which finally transformed as a weird argument of trinity of God. Foreseeing grave consequences of the extremism, the Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) strongly warned his followers never to exceed the limits of love to him. Excess of love is also a kind of extremism. Although the love to the Prophet (pbuh) is an essential component of faith, a Muslim is required to be vigilant not to reach his tremendous love in a state of assigning divinity for the Prophet (pbuh) as the Christianity did to Jesus. Here the Prophet (pbuh) put a limit even to one of the fundamental aspects of Islam such as love of the Prophet Muhammad (pbuh).

Jews on the other hand, have exceeded in their religious teachings in many ways and reached into extremism by killing the Prophets (pbut) who had been sent to them. In connection with Jews’ approach, once the Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) said; if (in the first instance) they sacrificed any cow chosen by themselves, they would have fulfilled their duty; but they made it complicated for themselves, and so God made complicated for them.”46 In short, the sūrat al-Fātiḥah teaches Muslims to be consistent in the right path, keeping away from the deviated ways and dis-

---

44 The Qur’an, 5:77.
45 The Qur’an, 4:171.
46 Ibn Ashur, 88.
torted teachings of the two early communities for their excessiveness and extremism, by its frequent and incessant invocation during obligatory and optional prayers. The prayer is pivotal in the Shariah. Seeking the guidance of straight path not leaning towards either extreme ways becomes a major theme of the Shariah.

This first and most important chapter in the Qur’an serves as a beautiful manifestation of the concept of wasatiyyah, especially in the sense of balance and a middle way. On the one hand this opening chapter presents Islam as a middle or moderate way of life and mode of ibadah against Christianity and Judaism, and on the other hand, it exhorts to keep a right sort of balance in all walks of life of a Muslim. The idea of wasatiyyah is implicitly packed with the guidance, admonitions and teachings of the Shariah. Whereas it explicitly calls for the appreciation of the moral quality of wasatiyyah occasionally, it urges sometimes without explicit textual expressions.

Wasatiyyah based approaches of the Qur’an:
Some other examples

In addition to the above, we can see some other statements in the Quran which implicitly emphasize the theme in different ways. An amazing pattern of balancing has been logically occupied in the style and choice of words in the Qur’an. The analysis of such few ayahs given below will be helpful to understand the argument more reasonably. God says;

And who, whenever they spend on others, are neither wasteful nor niggardly but [remember that] there is always a just mean between those [two extremes].

And neither allow thy hand to remain shackled to thy neck, nor stretch it forth to the utmost limit [of thy capacity], lest thou find thyself blamed [by thy dependents], or even destitute.

In the first ayah, God illustrates the virtuous qualities of ʿibād al-Rahmān, obedient servants of God. Among these qualities, He Exalted enumerates the quality of moderation which is a clear illustration of moderation. It is said that keeping away from the two extremes positions in spending money is desirable. Both extreme points are blameworthy. Spending too much to a level of extravagancy and being stingy and un-generous even for own needs are undesirable. The best position is being in between the two extremes. The wasatiyyah approach is exemplified here in an unusual way. In the same vein, the surah al-Isrā also promotes the same message. The second ayah also deals with the same issue in different words.

---

48 The Qur’an, 17: 29.

Facilitating the things and letting people to have a sort of comfort is also a part of accepting a balanced and moderate position in the life. This is why God clearly explains that He does not want people be in difficulties and be burdened. God says; “God intends every facility for you and he intends not put you in hardship.”

Another example of balancing approach of the Quran has been expressed through this ayah; “Grant us good in this world and good in the hereafter.” This admonition is a clear sign of keeping a balanced approach, neither inclining towards this world alone, nor the other world alone, but holding the two worlds together and equally. An interesting fact is that the Qur’ān has kept a balancing even in the number of times both the words were used. Each word is used 115 times in the Quran. This ayah apparently leaves us with the Qur’anic philosophy of wasatiyyah which is a right sort of equilibrium and balance in approaching the worldly life and the world to come.

In order to substantiate the above said Qur’anic statements, there are some prophetic traditions as well. It is reported on the authority of Anas bin Mālik that the Prophet [pbuh] is reported to have said: “The best among you are not those who neglect this life for the life to come, nor those who neglect the life to come for the sake of this life. Rather each of them serves as a path leading to the other. Hence blame accrues when one exceeds the limits of need and those of sufficiency.” This hadith also implies the importance of keeping a balancing between worldly and heavenly life. The companions who learned and trained from the School of the Prophet [pbuh] have also upheld the theme in their life. For example, Ali bin Abī Tālib is reported to have said these words; “Strive in your worldly affairs as if you will live forever, and strive in your affairs of the hereafter as if you will die tomorrow.” Working for

49 The Qur’ān, 2: 185.
50 The Qur’ān, 2:201.
52 It has been reported from the various sources mainly as a saying of the fourth rightly
Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism this world and coming up with something fruitful in this world has never been considered derogatory rather it is actually viewed as a form of 'ibādah itself,\textsuperscript{53} by which a believer gains the reward from God. Here the equal footing is given to both this world and the hereafter.

Another example of a balance that we require to keep in our life is taught by the Prophet (pbuh). For which we need to invoke to God

Besides the Qur’anic supplication mentioned above, the Prophet (pbuh) taught us another invocation which also teaches us to pray for keeping us away from the two extreme situations. “O God! I seek refuge to Thee from poverty and from disbelief.”\textsuperscript{54} The poverty is an extreme pathetic situation in the life, it is one of the extreme sufferings of material life. On the other hand, at the end of other side the Prophet (pbuh) taught us to be away from the situation of disbelief which brings man to the total failure and eternal disgrace.

Besides the above discussed instructions on moderation, the Qur’an appears to be accommodating a pattern of balancing in choosing some words and their contrasting words. If we look at the Qur’an, we can see a number of words and their antonyms that have been employed in the Qur’an in a symmetrical position. This is also a kind of a balanced approach of the Qur’an. It also denotes the Qur’anic literary style which retains a balancing in the employment of such words. It would be interesting to note the figure given below which shows the Qur’anic juxtaposition of some words and their balance.

\begin{quote}
\end{quote}

\begin{quote}
\end{quote}

\begin{quote}
\end{quote}
The above figure shows how the Qur’an used some words and their equal proportion. The juxtaposition of the word dunya, this world and akhira, the hereafter, angels and satan, life and death, man and woman are the testimony for the numerical balancing of the Qur’an.

From the above analysis, we would be able to see all instructions related to all aspects of life, whether legal or ethical, social and spiritual, have been granted to the humanity which help people to maintain balance and order. All rulings and admonitions of the Shariah urge Muslims to be moderate and balanced. The spirit of wasatiyyah is ingrained in every breadth and width of the Shariah. It could be assumed that the wasatiyyah, is a middle station between two stations at opposing sides. It means that there are three situations or positions for all the issues even in religious affairs. It may be suffixed as negligence in pursuing what is of benefit. Secondly excess position or extreme level and the third position is middle and moderate station or stance.

Wasatiyya to Counter the Challenges of Violence and Extremism

In the previous section, we discussed views of some scholars on the theme of wasatiyya and its orientation toward maqāsid. But in order to establish the vitality of this theme some other aspects seem to be vital.

---

56 Ibid.
57 Attia, 85.
Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism for analysis. The area we dealt with so far deals mainly with conceptual presentation of the principle of wasatiyya. We also need to analyze its practical implications in society, especially in the multi-religious societies of our time. It is expected from the contemporary scholars to develop a strategy based on wasatiyyah. In addition to this, the study argues the wasatiyyah based approach is an essential tool to combat the extreme tendencies in societies. This approach has always been employed by the early scholars to address the challenges of social problems like extremism and intolerance.

Wasatiyyah Based Approaches of Various Muslim Scholars

Slipping from the middle position and balanced approach of the Shariah and inclining towards either of two extreme poles has always been witnessed as a social phenomenon in history. However, as God promised, the emergence of the reformers in the beginning of every century will always managed to correct such tendencies and to place back the Shariah in its right place. The Prophet Muhammad (pbuh) had instantly corrected the tendencies of extremism and undue negligence among his companions in his life time which finally enabled them to be exemplified as the perfect model of a moderate and balanced society. However, after the demise of the Messenger (pbuh), the Muslim society had witnessed the tendency of deviation by losing the wasatiyyah, moderate state of affairs. God had promised that He would send reformers to renew His din in every dawn of the century. Their renewal efforts and reform schemes, though heterogeneous, appear to be a kind of efforts of bringing back the wasatiyyah, balance and moderation in Muslim society. The reformers always had strived to renovate and renew this character in their respective times, in one way or another. They sought to bring a right sort of balance at socio-ethical levels. They had adopted a balance and moderation in approaching the Shariah. Although their contributions and efforts are varying from person to person, time to time, the overall efforts of each one have been instrumental to present the Shariah as a balanced scheme of life.

The Need of Prioritization and Balanced Approach in the Contemporary Societies

Giving utter importance to unnecessary issues and ignoring the crucial problems of society is truly an unbalanced approach and the disorder of the priorities. This tendency is just opposite of the Qur’anic concept of moderation. Here is the wasatiyyah approach which is becoming relevant in order to treat these social problems. Putting the things in their right position and right propositions or approaching an issue in its right degree of concern is something which rightly be described as wasatiyyah approach.58

As part of worship and spiritual activities Muslims who live in multi-religious society should avoid to conduct big gatherings, most often for non-obligatory acts, as a public nuisance. They should not disrupt the peaceful and serene atmosphere of community. They should think how to maintain environmental purity and avoid noise pollution. Should they use huge sound system and loud speakers if they are not needed? The majority in society might not be the part of the event. If Muslims do so it will unwillingly force other communities to suffer. In several parts of India Muslims, though they are minority, use the loud speaker to make the tarāwīh prayer and non-obligatory offerings of prayer in high volume which affect the people of other faiths in many ways. Giving unnecessary importance to the trivial issues is kind of expression of extremism.

As far as the case of prayer, obligatory or tarāwīh, are concerned using the loudspeaker cannot be considered as a recommended practice. According to the maqāsid, it will never be considered under the category of ḍarūriyāt, but only under tahnīyāt or embellishment. At the expense of the tahnīyāt, which is particularly concerned to Muslim community alone, the ḍarūriyāt of all people, which is the freedom of their faith and freedom of their peaceful living is violated. The fundamental rights and freedom (maqāsid) of other people should be taken into consideration in their right degree. The ignorance on the overall objectives of the Shari'ah and overlooking its outstanding principles seem to be instrumental for these extremist tendencies in multi-religious societies. In short, it would not be fair to bring hair splitting disputed issues of fiqh in to the multi-religious societies. The concern of the common people in such society is not the jurisprudential issues, especially the issues related to a particular religious group rather, the fundamental issues belong to their life and society would be their main concern. As al-Qaradawi pointed out, the emphasis should not be placed on minor or controversial issues, but on fundamentals.60 In multi-religious society the image of Islam should be 58 This is part of fiqh al-muwāzanan.

---

59 It is common in Kerala to use loud speaker at night prayer during Ramadan and other occasions of optional prayers such as solat offerings from Sunni community.
60 Al-Qaradawi, Islamic....., 24.
highlighted with its fundamental principles of iman and higher principles and values by which people of other communities might be closer and less hostile to Islam. From the right and balanced priorities of Muslim communities, the people of other faith can easily convince that the Shariah is actually meant for the well-being and good for all.

Conclusion

From the above illustration, it is clear that keeping the moderation in all aspects of human life is an essential part of the Shariah. The principles of the Shariah are not for dealing with some aspects, but for all aspects of life. The moderation is recommended for life as a fundamental principle. The theme, therefore, elevates itself as a fundamental universal principle upheld by the Shariah which aims to bring benefits and welfare of humanity through the attainment of this objective. Since the overall objective of the Shariah is to bring good and benefits to humanity, deviating from the moderation by inclining either to negligence or to extremism, is considered as equal to bringing harm to society. In addition, the universality of moderation is justified as it is prescribed to observe at all occasions and situations and irrespective of time and space. In many places, we have seen the Qur’an directly and indirectly exhorts believers to apply this notion individually and collectively. Moreover, the title of wasatiyyah justly balanced is designated as the fundamental feature of Muslim community. All this indicates that the wasatiyyah could be enumerated as one of the higher objectives of the Shariah. As some of the principles of the Shariah like justice and freedom are conceived in later period as the higher objectives of the Shariah, the wasatiyyah could also be considered as a higher objective of the Shariah.

In short, the concept of wasatiyyah, from merely an ethical value which is most often confined at individual level, needs to be elevated to a broader perspective as the principle and objective of the Shariah. Such kind of presentation will enable people to view it as a major life scheme for Muslims as well as non-Muslims at societal and global level. And it has to be practiced in all kinds of societies prevailing today irrespective of Muslim dominated or Muslim minority societies. It is, therefore, genuine to conclude that the moderation is the best and most suitable approach in the multi-religious society as well.

---

61 Kamali, The Middle..., 1.
BIBLIOGRAPHY

Wasatiyyah [Moderation] as the Principle and Objective of the Shariah as a Solution for Preventing Violence and Extremism

Hassan, Muhammad Haniff, Wasatiyya as explained by Prof. Muhammad Kamal Hasan: Justice, Excellence and Balance, Counter Terrorist Trends and Analysis, vol. 6, issue 2, 2014.

Omer, Spahic. the Role of the Madinah Market at the time of the Prophet (pbuh). Retrieved on October 14, 2017.

Yousuf, Ahmad F. Applications of Wasatiyyah in the Contemporary Muslim World. Gombak: IIUM Press, 2015.